

Corporate design

Our website is designed for a German lovers of football, so it has rather simpler overall structure. The background and primary color of our site is black, the secondary color (color of some of the elements of the website) is green.

1900 - this is a logo of our website, it is displayed at the top of each page of the site. Our site is about German National Football team, so logo is its year of foundation (1900) colored in the colors of German flag.

"Football is a simple game: 22 men chase a ball for 90 minutes and at the end, the Germans always win." – famous quote of Gary Lineker, which is, probably, the best option for the key phrase of a website about German National Football team. This quote is displayed on the main page of the website right below the logo.

On the left-up corner there is a navigation bar, which is accessible from all pages of our site (except of the imprint page), provides better navigation (for now all pages except of the home page are almost empty). In the sections Tournaments, Players and Coaches later on will be stored the main data of the site (sql tables), news section is for the news of German football team.

Below the quote there is an animation just for better appearance of the site.

Lower in the home page there is a title of the website – Bundesteam (nickname of the German National Football team) and some general text.

Below there are three images with interactive links on them that can redirect readers to three different sites where they can obtain more information.

Bottom of the main page (same as bottoms of all other pages of the website) contains picture of a goal for a better look, and at the very end users can find the imprint link – link to the disclaimer and to the information about creators of the site.

The imprint page contains disclaimer and our names and our email addresses.
